New Beginnings:

John A. Synodinos Becomes Fifteenth President in Day of Celebration

by Melissa J. Huffman '88

President Synodinos recalled a moment's conversation with Thomas C. Reinhart '58, first vice-chairperson of the Board of Trustees, as the two walked down the aisle of Miller Chapel at the 15th Lebanon Valley College Presidential Inauguration.

"John, it's like we're getting married." To which President Synodinos replied, "Tom, you don't understand — we are."

"It is much like a wedding rite," President Synodinos explained. "An inauguration bonds the new president to the institution. Ceremonies like that are public occasions — it's a life-changing experience."

Though President Synodinos had taken over his duties in July, Inauguration Day (Sunday, December 4, 1988) marked the official beginning of this life-changing experience for President Synodinos, his family, and for the College.

The day began with the inaugural worship service in Miller Chapel, featuring the Rev. Joseph A. Sellinger, S.J., president of John Synodinos' alma mater, Loyola College in Baltimore, MD.

Speaking to today's students, Father Sellinger said, "At Lebanon realistic world to find something positive, good, and hopeful in the midst of what seems evil and hopeless.

"And one day," he concluded, "you will know yourself, and you will like what you see."

"Father Sellinger gave one of the finest sermons I've ever heard," commented President Synodinos, "and I was especially pleased that this first activity of Lebanon Valley's inauguration day focused on students."

President Synodinos added that the inaugural worship service was especially meaningful for him both because he graduated from Loyola College and because his whole family was there to share it with him. In addition to his wife Glenda, brothers, cousins, aunt, and uncle, both of his daughters, Victoria Lynn Synodinos-Gertenbach (who just blessed the Synodinos' with a granddaughter, Emily), and Jean Louise Synodinos (who is an actress currently appearing in the off-Broadway hit Tony and Tina's Wedding) were present for the day's events.

After the service, and an inaugural luncheon in the Mund College Center, Conrad Bishop and Elizabeth Fuller of the widely-respected Independent Eye, a theater in Lancaster, performed a concert reading called "Beginnings" in the Little Theatre.

Next came the main event of the day: the inauguration of John A. Synodinos as the fifteenth President of Lebanon Valley College. It was a ceremony marked by excitement and warmth.

The audience entered the soon-to-be-filled chapel and listened to music by Suzanne Caldwell Riehl '79, organist, accompanied by student instrumentalists. Musical interludes throughout the ceremony were also provided by tenor Philip Morgan, who sang Brahms' "Sonntag" and "Wie bist du, Meine Konigin," and the Quartet/Die Posaunen (the nation's first trombone quartet), who performed "Celebration," a song composed for and dedicated to the inauguration of President Synodinos by Rodney S. Miller '77.

Following the invocation by College Chaplain John Abernathy Smith and an official welcome by Mr. Reinhart, the inaugural address was given by Dr. Richard P. Traina, president of Having been invested and presented with the ceremonial robe and presidential collar, Lebanon Valley College's 15th President, John A. Synodinos, addressed the over 1000 students, alumni, parents, and friends present.

"In choosing John Synodinos as your fifteenth president," said Dr. Traina, "you have chosen to go for a ride on a tiger. It is a credit to you to have selected him, and you must already know how ardently he has taken to you. John has a very keen understanding of what is and will be required of a small liberal arts institution as we move into the next century. You get all that energy and commitment from John, plus Glenda Synodinos too — a person who will dedicate her own considerable strengths appropriately to the welfare of this College. You have done well. I find myself here to congratulate you as well as to celebrate John and Glenda."

On hand during the ceremony to deliver greetings to the President were representatives of the faculty, the administration and staff, the students, the alumni, the local government, the business community, the United Methodist Church, and the academic community. Among those present were: Rose Marie Swanger, chairperson of the Lebanon

County Board of Commissioners; Albert B. Murry, president and chief executive officer of Lebanon Valley National Bank; the Rev. Felton E. May, bishop of the Harrisburg Area United Methodist Church; and Dr. Robert W. Neff, president of Juniata College.

After the inaugural prayer offered by Rabbi Charles D. Mintz, Ohev Sholom Reform Temple, Dr. Elizabeth K. Weisburger '44, chairperson of the College's Board of Trustees, invested John A. Synodinos with his office and presented him with the ceremonial robe and presidential collar.

Dr. Weisburger later said that she was glad to be part of the memorable ceremony and commented on President Synodinos' characteristic energy, "He likes to get things done."

President Synodinos' inaugural response, which he "got done" with eloquence and style, acknowledged the dedicated support of the College's "family" and outlined his plans for the College's future.

He began by saying, "These rites of inauguration, medieval in origin, represent society's way of reminding those who profess to lead that they are but stewards of tradition, even as they seek to implement change." He later commented about the pageantry on a more personal level, "...nobody is accustomed to that kind of attention. The attention is for the Office of the College President, not for me. It helps to keep it separate in one's mind."

"Every one of the alumni who responded told me about the men and women of character and commitment who taught them, and who influenced their lives profoundly"

After giving personal thanks to many of those present, President Synodinos especially noted the gratitude the College owed its faculty. He said that he had written to the College's graduates and asked them what made Lebanon Valley special. "Every one of the alumni who responded told me about the men and women of character and commitment who taught them, and who influenced their lives profoundly—you, the faculty, are what make this College a very special place."

Of the students, "the individuals who make this job worth doing," he recalled memorable events in which he had already shared, including "receiving late on Homecoming Saturday a delegation of 100 happy freshmen who asked me for the following Monday off from class in honor of the football team's victory that afternoon over our traditional rivals." (They did get the day off!)

The President describes Lebanon Valley students as "warm, friendly, caring young people." He meets monthly with all interested students in the Faust Lounge to discuss their concerns, to inform students of College plans, and to get feedback. "If there is a single thing you have to learn as a college president, it's to consult," he said.

President Synodinos also expressed in his inaugural response appreciation of his family and their support. He acknowledged that he would not have taken on this responsibility without the wholehearted support of Glenda, whom he characterized as having enthusiastically taken on the role of the president's wife, knowing that it, too, is a full-time, demanding job.

President Synodinos then acknowledged the recent accomplishments of the College and went on to detail some of his plans for the future. Though perhaps an unusual perspective for a former history major, President Synodinos said, "The things most important to me are not those that have happened, but the things that are going to happen."

He outlined his specific plans in some detail: "Initial high priority will be given to the renovation of that part of Lynch Physical Education Center that surrounds the gymnasium to create new quarters for our management and mathematical sciences departments, and for a computer center. The redesign of Lynch will include faculty and staff offices, classrooms, and computer laboratories. The implementation of a substantial portion of the overall landscaping plan will also be a high priority.

"Looking to the future," President Synodinos added, "the campus plan features such exciting improvements as renovation and expansion of the library; a major conversion of the Administration Building into an academic center of the humanities; a refurbishment of the Blair Music Center to provide improved fine arts facilities: interior redecoration of the Mund College Center; relocation of student health services into a modern facility; creation of an alumni center; addition of an intercollegiate athletic field house to the Arnold Sports Center; renovation of the remaining portions of Lynch Gymnasium as a center for continuing education and special programs; and, finally, restoration of Centre Hall for admissions.

"We need to look afresh at our student housing facilities...[to] create the kinds of small group living opportunities, the kinds of social groupings, that afford students optional living patterns more suited to a residential liberal arts college."

President Synodinos also noted that "we must increase annual giving and raise endowment funds to sustain and support a caring and committed faculty and to provide them with the resources they need to continue their records of excellence.

"This is an ambitious program," he added, "one that may take a decade to complete. At today's costs, the program will require expenditures of $18 million, but the College must invest in the renewal of its facilities now if we are to enter the next century a strong and vigorous institution."

"If the education we offer is to change, we must change ourselves! Truly, we must become one with the future that is bearing down upon us. Our students and our heritage deserve no less."

Along with his perspectives on the College, President Synodinos expressed his views about our national future: "a future that will find our country increasingly interdependent with others — a future in which knowledge of other cultures and languages, appreciation of the views of others, and an understanding of the economic structures and business practices of other nations will be vital."

He concluded by charging each individual with the responsibility for personal change. "If the education we offer is to change, we must change ourselves! Truly, we must become one with the future that is bearing down upon us. Our students and our heritage deserve no less."

After his response, President Synodinos conferred the College's honorary doctor of humane letters degree on Dr. Richard P. Traina. The ceremony concluded with a benediction given by the Rev. Alexander Veronis, protopresbyter, Annunciation Orthodox Church.

A gala inaugural dinner in the Mund College Center followed the ceremony. The day then concluded with the annual "Christmas at the Valley" program which featured scripture readings, music, carol singing, and a live creche. President Synodinos said that he will never forget "the simplicity and sheer beauty of that powerful, beautiful program."

Reactions to the inaugural address, and to the new president reflected John Synodinos' energy and enthusiasm.

Douglas L. Nyce '89, president of the Student Council, commented that "students are realizing more and more that he is committed to every part of the College, especially the students."

John W. Metka '60, president of the Alumni Association, agreed. "You know he's interested in you and what you have to say. I have been very impressed with him: he's a sharp gentleman. He makes decisions and sticks by them. I see him as being a real 'go-getter.' I'm really looking forward to the next few years."

Thomas Reinhart, who, in addition to being a Trustee, served as the chairperson of the presidential selection committee, also voiced his approval. "We are very, very pleased that President Synodinos is on board. Out of all the people that we interviewed and received inquiries from, his qualities placed him head and shoulders above the others."

But Mr. Reinhart offered an additional insight worth remembering. "Despite John Synodinos' exceptional qualifications, no one individual can achieve the dreams in the hearts and souls of all of us. This will require the commitment of the entire Lebanon Valley College family."

Youth Scholars Get a Taste of College Life

by John B. Deamer Jr.

For the 15th summer, the Lebanon Valley College's Youth Scholars Institute will introduce promising high school students to college-level work and a sampling of college life with three one-week educational programs scheduled for this coming June and July.

The Youth Scholars Institute was created in 1975 to promote science careers to promising high school seniors. Since then it has evolved into a nationally recognized program offering current sophomores and juniors fifteen academic disciplines from which to choose. This summer, nearly 300 students are expected to enroll in the program.

"I was ready to attend nursing school and did not want to go to college," said Barb Feaster '86, a former Youth Scholars Institute participant and a current admissions counselor at the College. "When I first attended a YSI session, I spoke with Dr. [Donald] Dahlberg, associate professor of chemistry, and he emphasized the importance of getting a college degree. My high school chemistry teacher told me the same thing so I decided to attend a Youth Scholars session. I was impressed by the people, the atmosphere and the caring professors at Lebanon Valley College. If I had not attended a Youth Scholars Institute program, I know I would not have eventually attended Lebanon Valley College."

For Jeanne Adams, a sophomore chemistry major, Mohnton, PA, attending a Youth Scholars session helped her decide upon a major.

"Between my junior and senior year in high school I did not know what to expect from college," said Ms. Adams. "Being a Youth Scholar helped me to decide my major and also helped me prepare for collegiate study and collegiate life."

Youth Scholars attend classes and laboratory sessions, study, and live like college students. Participants work closely with Lebanon Valley College faculty members during their week-long stay and pursue classes taught on the same level as those available to college students.

The Youth Scholars Institute is a mandatory residence program. Students live on campus in the dormitories and dine in the Mund College Center. Morning and afternoon hours are spent in class while social and recreational activities, both on and off campus, take place each evening.

All participants in the program must be nominated by high school teachers or guidance counselors. Students may enroll in only one academic program per session, but three different sessions are offered throughout the summer. Each nominee is mailed an application form that requires the student to write a brief essay explaining why the particular academic program was selected and what the student's intended career goals are. Completed applications are submitted to the appropriate academic department and are reviewed by faculty members who select exceptional candidates for their programs.

Each student attending the program receives a scholarship from Lebanon Valley College to cover the expense of tuition and fees. Youth Scholars are asked to pay $235 to cover room, meals, and recreational activities.

Disciplines in this year's program include biology, chemistry, education, English, foreign language, leadership studies, management, mathematics, music, physics, political science, psychology, and sociology and social work.

If you know any high school student who would enjoy the Youth Scholars Institute, please contact: Dr. Dale Erskine, director of the Youth Scholars Institute, at Lebanon Valley College, Annville, PA, 17003-0501, (717) 867-6176, or call Ms. Tammy Steele, coordinator of the Division of Summer Studies, (717) 867-6213. This year's sessions will be held during the following weeks: June 25-30; July 9-14; and July 23-28.

Youth Scholars work with Dr. Erskine (upper cenIer) to perform an electrocardiogram (EKG) on a subject in one of the "YSI" biology labs. Honors Students Study Valley Tradition by Don Hoepfer '89 It all started last spring. Mrs. Vivelo, our instructor for Honors 204, Human Creativity, was telling us of a quaint, bygone tradition at Lebanon Valley — the Annual Murder. We were all entranced by the plot of this highly innovative means by which upperclassmen for 31 years welcomed the freshmen.

It seems that each year the new students would be introduced to a recently engaged couple. But alas, things quickly turned sour as a rival soon emerged for the lady's affections. Things grew more tense daily with public arguments, tauntings, fights, and other sundry confrontations. Finally, the campus' worst fears were realized: the jilted lover, in a drunken rampage, shot and killed the interloper. At last the murderer was captured and brought before the vengeful student body, but before any lynchings were performed, the murderer was joined by his ex-fiancée and the suddenly-not-so-dead victim. Together, the trio wished the freshman class a great four years at

We loved the tale; the Lebanon Valley it spoke of seemed so different from the hallowed halls we see every day. Imagine, an Annual Murder. It was so different, so ingenious, so nasty a thing to do to the freshmen.

Frankly, we wanted to be just as nasty to the next crop of freshmen, but, because we feared retribution, we chose what seemed to be the next best avenue: for our upcoming junior seminar we decided to study murder. Just think of it, a whole semester devoted to the likes of Charles Manson, Ted Bundy, Jay Smith. For three credits we'd learn about neat things like guns, knives, poisons. Our thoughts would turn to things like blood, terror, psychoses. Exciting, huh?

For some reason, when it got down to specifically mapping out the semester, we'd had a change of heart. A staged murder, no matter how realistic, is a far cry from the real thing. We went back to what had caught our attention in the first place the lure of the old LVC. What really interested us was the sense of a hidden tradition. All of this time we had thought of Lebanon Valley College as only some static institution, with little that has changed or will change. The Annual Murder made us realize that we had a lot to learn. And so we decided to learn what we could: the Honors Class of 1990 chose to investigate the history of Lebanon Valley College.

The Honors Class of 1990 received so many artifacts from alumni during their study that they decided to put together this permanent display in the foyer of the College's Administration Building.

What we wanted was to learn about LVC's personal history — the people, pranks, and everything else that made it different. We had several resources at hand to help with our search: we rummaged through old yearbooks and newspapers, as well as the College's archives in the Shenk Room. But to get a truly personal feel for the College as it used to be, we had to go to those who were there to experience it. So it was that we sought out and conducted interviews with alumni in the immediate vicinity. We had found our gold mine. The alumni were willing to talk and were a source of illuminating facts and entertaining anecdotes. We learned about sports, pranks, faculty, students, the campus, Annville, and college life in general. Some donated memorabilia to help our efforts. Several even donated their time to come in and talk to the entire class.

This success led us to conduct a mass mailing, asking alumni around the nation for help. The response was tremendous; we had again tapped a fount of information. It was interesting to see what these people remembered most about college: for some it was dorm life, others pranks, others sports, and we read numerous stories about faculty, classmates, romances, and anything else that might come to mind. We got more memorabilia: people sent us their precious photographs, beanies, and yearbooks.

What did we do with all this? During the year, we entertained the campus community (well, we like to think so!) with weekly bulletin boards and articles in La Vie Collegienne--the information for which came directly from our investigations. Also, a bound copy of our interviews is going to be placed in the Gossard Library, and a booklet encapsulating what we learned is going to be published. And, for some of us, the work isn't over; several display cases devoted to LVC are in the works.

We left a lot still to be learned. That's regrettable, but perhaps understandable. We accomplished a good deal, but we think, in retrospect, that the true worth of our project lies elsewhere. When we saw what it meant to the alumni to relive their days at LVC, we grew in our appreciation of our school. We saw it as they saw it and as it is now. Therein lies our greatest gratification: bringing Lebanon Valley College to life as a dynamic, ongoing institution.

Darwin Glick '58:

An Alumnus with a Strong Commitment to His Community

by M.J. Bishop '84

One of the most rewarding parts of my job as director of alumni services is meeting and talking with our College's graduates. Time and time again, I am struck by the generosity and benevolence of Lebanon Valley College alumni.

When I met Mr. Darwin Glick '58 in Lebanon, PA, I was far from disappointed — Mr. Glick has a heart-felt commitment to the Lebanon community and a fond affection for the College.

After graduating with an economics major in 1958, Mr. Glick worked for a year in the Harrisburg area before returning to his native Lebanon to work for and eventually become a partner in the accounting firm Fred Reiss & Company.

After Fred Reiss' death in 1969, Mr. Glick joined two other Lebanon Valley graduates, David L. Stanilla '69 and Thomas I. Siegel '76, to organize what is now the largest accounting firm in Lebanon — Glick, Stanilla, and Siegel.

"I like to hire and work with Lebanon Valley graduates," said Mr.

Darwin Glick '58 at his desk in the offices of Glick, Stanilla, and Siegel — and as he appeared in the 1958 Quittapahilla yearbook.

Glick. "I know that they will be well trained and have an aptitude for learning new things." In addition to the partners, other Lebanon Valley graduates who have worked with Mr. Glick include the firm's current account executive, James L. Kissinger '77, and Craig R. Werner '72.

"Not only does the College produce very capable graduates," Glick added, "I believe that Lebanon Valley provides this community with a golden opportunity to improve the quality of life here — and I want to be supportive of that effort."

That isn't the only way Mr. Glick supports the Lebanon community. He is currently Board Treasurer (and a past chairperson) for the Good Samaritan Hospital, a past Lions' Club president, Board Treasurer for the United Way chapter, and very active at the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

"I believe that the Lebanon community is moving into a new, more positive era," said Mr. Glick. "It's evident all around us in new construction and the number of investors coming into the area."

"As the community continues to improve, it's exciting to see that the College is also moving toward preparing itself to take on a leadership role in the Lebanon area," said Mr. Glick. "I'd like to see the cooperation between the College and the community continue to develop — and I think that the College's new President, John A. Synodinos, will be able to direct Lebanon Valley toward meeting that challenge in the years to come."

On Saturday, February 25, Mr. Glick further demonstrated his affection for his alma mater and his interest in being a part of Lebanon Valley's leadership role in the community by accepting his election to the College's Board of Trustees.

Mr. Glick and his wife Elizabeth Speicher Glick, also a 1958 graduate of Lebanon Valley College, live in Lebanon. The couple has two grown children, Amy and Frederick.

Along with Lebanon Valley graduates David L. Stanilla '69 and Thomas I. Siegel '76, Mr. Glick runs the largest accounting firm in Lebanon.

Ernest P. Kline Receives 1989 Founders Day Award

Former Lieutenant Governor Ernest P. Kline received Lebanon Valley College's Founders Day Award at a ceremony commemorating the event Tuesday, February 21, in Miller

Chapel.

After words of welcome from President John A. Synodinos, the day's events began with an address by Dr. Warren Bryan Martin, Senior Fellow at the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. Dr. Martin's speech emphasized the importance of maintaining a balance between "education for competence and education for character." Both, he said, are essential. "A central role of education is to prepare good citizens, good neighbors..."

After Dr. Martin's address, President Synodinos conferred the 10th annual Founders Day Award on Hon. Ernest P. Kline. The award recognizes a Central Pennsylvania resident whose life, emulating the founders of Lebanon Valley College, exemplifies the advancement of the religious, intellectual, social, and physical well-being of mankind.

Mr. Kline was honored for his success in combining excellence in his professional as well as personal life.

Pennsylvania's 25th lieutenant governor (1970-78), has served as a city councilman, worker's compensation referee, state senator, and constitutional convention delegate.

He began his career in state government in 1965 as a state senator from Beaver County. In 1967, he was elected floor leader, a position he kept until he was elected lieutenant governor in 1970.

In addition to those duties, he served as chairman of the Board of Pardons, chairman of the State Council of Civil Defense, chairman of the Bicentennial Commission, and chairman of the Governor's Energy Council.

Mr. Kline is now a private governmental consultant but continues to be active in community work by serving on the Lebanon United Way and Hershev Ronald McDonald House Board of Directors, and as an active member of the Catholic Church both on the local and diocesan levels. Said President Synodinos, "he is active in his church, but the most striking thing is that his faith is active in his life."

After accepting the award, Mr. Kline credited his family and God for helping him to achieve his success. He went on to recall his "activist years" of service. "I felt then and frankly, I feel today that we as a community of people have a responsibility for the welfare of each individual person," he said. "Whether we exercise that responsibility through government action or through other private means, I hold to the belief that we should be doing something." (reprinted in part from The Daily News, February 22, 1989. Article by Melissa Huffman '88)

An Old Friend is Felled

After fighting for its life since the early 1980s, the sad decision was reluctantly made in November 1988 to fell the old elm tree that stood in the "social quad" in front of the Mund College Center. Although its summer shade and fall colors are gone forever, pieces of it may soon be available as mementos through the Alumni Services Office. Look for more details in future issues of the Valley magazine.

Where Are the Trees?

In an attempt to update College records, and in anticipation of a "Memorial Plantings Program" (look for details in an upcoming issue of the Valley), all readers are asked to help identify any trees planted on campus over the years in memory of persons or events.

If you know of any memorial plantings on College grounds, where they are located, or the species planted, please write Matthew A. Hugg, director of development, Lebanon Valley College, Annville, PA 17003 by June

Lebanon Valley College Receives $400,000 Challenge Grant from Kline Foundation

A challenge grant of $400,000 has been made to Lebanon Valley College from the Josiah W. and Bessie H. Kline Foundation, Inc., Harrisburg, PA, for use toward the construction costs of the College's Edward H. Arnold Sports Center.

In order to qualify for the $400,000 Lebanon Valley College must increase the College's Annual Giving income by an average yearly rate of $80,000 over the next five years, beginning with the fiscal year 1989. This challenge will be earned on a $1 for $1 basis, whereby the Foundation will match each new dollar given to the Annual Giving Fund of the College.

"The accumulated impact of matching an average $80,000 increase in each of the next five years will raise a total $1.2 million for current operations of Lebanon Valley College," said College President John Synodinos. "The Kline Foundation program has enabled the constituents of Lebanon Valley College to make a meaningful contribution to the Annual Fund while at the same time participating in the College's current 125th Anniversary Campaign."

The Josiah W. and Bessie H. Kline Foundation was established in 1952 for the benefit of the Central Pennsylvania community. The foundation primarily supports educational, medical, and other benevolent or charitable institutions. Most grants are for building funds, special projects, and for research or scholarship funds.

In 1982, Lebanon Valley College accepted its first Kline Challenge: A $250,000 grant to the Garber Science Center project, to be matched by an additional $1,000,000 raised by the College. Lebanon Valley College successfully met this challenge by June 1984. In recognition of the Foundation's philanthropy, the College designated a major biology laboratory in the Garber Science Center as the Josiah W. and Bessie H. Kline laboratory.

Sound Recording Technology Majors Assist In Live Telecast

For the fifth consecutive year, Sound Recording Technology majors provided broadcast audio and stage foldback for a live broadcast on WHTM-TV 27, Harrisburg, PA on January 14 and 15.

The Harrisburg station, an ABC affiliate, telecasted local cutaways as part of the annual United Cerebral Palsy Telethon which was broadcast nationwide. Nine of the 13 current Sound Recording Technology majors at Lebanon Valley College participated in coordinating the live broadcast from WHTM.

"You had to be sharp at all times," said Carla Wilson, a sophomore from Elizabethtown, PA. "The experience was similar to what happens on live remotes broadcast daily on the major networks and it helped to reinforce what I have learned in the classroom. This opportunity allowed me to work with video, production people, talent, and camera operators in a live setting."

"It was interesting working with all the different wireless systems," said Richard Kroth, a sophomore from Spring Valley, NY. "We were very pleased with our effort and we're ready for the challenge again next year." Other Lebanon Valley College students involved in the production included: Antoinette Davis '92, Philadelphia, PA; Edward VanLandeghem '91, Norristown, PA; Kevin Thomas '91, Woodbine, MD; Mike Lichtenwalner '91, Emmaus, PA; Dave Wilson '90, West Chester, PA; Tom Ball '90, Harrisburg, PA; and Glen Landrum '90, Dayton, MD.

Dr. C. F. Joseph Tom, professor of economics, and Dr. Joerge W.P. Mayer, professor of mathematics, both had books published recently.

Dr. Tom's book, Monetary

Problems of an Entrepot: The Hong Kong Experience, published in January, reviews Hong Kong's development since 1842 from a pirate-inhabited, insignificant little island off the southern coast of China into a major international entrepot, industrial entity, and financial center. The treatise provides an historical and analytical study of the economic development of the city from three specific monetary aspects: the choice of a monetary standard, the relationship between exchange rates and prices, and the supply of money.

While the work's primary focus is the Hong Kong experience as an entrepot prior to World War II, Dr. Tom's study is also applicable to two larger contemporary theoretical and empirical issues: first, how a particular economic entity should choose its monetary standard; and, second, since Hong Kong is so heavily dependent upon imports, the study of Hong Kong's price movement provides an ideal empirical verification of the theory of international price movements from one country to another via exchange rate.

Dr. Mayer's book, Assembly Language Programming: 8086/8088, 8087, was released in September 1988.

Assembly Language is the language which exists between programming language, such as BASIC, Pascal, COBOL, etc., and machine language of the Central Processing Unit of the Computer (C.P.U.). Essentially, it is machine language that is reworded for the human who needs words, not numbers. However, it is more complicated than BASIC, Pascal, and COBOL languages.

The book, which took Dr. Mayer two years to complete, is being sold as a text book to other colleges.

In Memory: Dr. Robert A. Clay

A well-respected and caring member of the Lebanon Valley College family died December 25, 1988 in the Hershey Medical Center.

Born in Oil City, PA, in 1940, Dr. Robert A. Clay dedicated his life to the academic profession, exemplifying the true meaning of service and commitment. He joined the Lebanon Valley faculty in 1978 as an associate professor of sociology and social service, and was chairman of the sociology department from 1980 to 1986. Many of the College's recent graduates remember Dr. Clay's unrelenting patience as dean of the registrar, a position he was appointed to in 1986.

Prior to the Valley, Dr. Clay held faculty positions at Kennedy Christian High School, Sharon, PA; Gannon College, Erie, PA; Eisenhower College, Seneca Falls, NY; and Tusculum College, Greenville, TN.

Dr. Clay earned his A.B. in philosophy from St. Mary's Seminary and University, Baltimore, MD, in 1962. He studied at North American College in Rome, Italy, from 1962 to 1964; and received an STB from the Pontifical Gregorian University,

Rome, Italy, in 1964. He received both his M.A. and Ph.D. in sociology from Cornell University in 1974 and 1982.

Dr. Clay initiated many projects for the advancement of Lebanon Valley, one of the most significant being the annual Quiz Bowl founded in 1981.

A memorial fund in Dr. Clay's memory has been established to provide an annual prize for junior sociology or social work majors. If you would like to contribute, please send your check made payable to: Lebanon Valley College/Bob Clay Memorial Fund, to the Advancement Office, Lebanon Valley College, Annville, PA 17003.

Field Hockey Wins First MAC Championship

by Tim Ebersole

With their 1-0 victory over Elizabethtown College on October 29th, the 1988 field hockey team became Lebanon Valley College's first women's team to win the Middle Atlantic Conference championship and compete in the NCAA Division III Regional Tournament. This MAC championship was Lebanon Valley's first since the 1972-73 men's basketball team attained the same status.

The 1988 field hockey team's championship season had many highlights. Every game became increasingly important as the season unfolded.

The team's first big win came at the Frostburg State Tournament in which they defeated Eastern Mennonite College, 2-1, in the consolation game -- this important victory ignited a record breaking 12-game winning streak.

After the Frostburg Tournament, the Valley women defeated 8th ranked Scranton University, 1-0, catapulting them into first place of the Northwest Section of the MAC. At that point, the only team between a Lebanon Valley College section title and home-field advantage for the entire MAC playoff series was Messiah College. Although the game ended in a scoreless tie, Messiah's earlier tie against Scranton meant the Valley had clinched the section title.

The MAC playoff games were all decided by one goal. In the John Hopkins victory (2-1), the women were led by Sandy Aumiller '90, who scored both goals, and the outstanding defense of Bryna Vandergrift '89. In the semifinals, the Valley had to come from behind with 40 seconds left in the game to defeat Drew University who had been ranked 10th nationally in Division III. Junior Cindy Watson's winning goal propelled the team into the MAC Championship game against Elizabethtown College -- a team who had defeated the Valley (2-4) in regular season play.

Unquestionably, beating Elizabethtown in the finals meant that every team member had to contribute, and the Valley women did just that: midfielder Sue Partilla '90 scored the championship game's lone goal on a penalty stroke with 13 minutes left in the second half; goalie Sue Leonard '92 had one of her best games in the goal, stopping 10 shots while earning her ninth shutout of the season; and, defensively, sweeper Vandergrift and back Kristen Brandt '90 both played an outstanding game. This combined team effort enabled the Valley to defeat the 4th ranked team in the NCAA Division III for the MAC Championship, and then to repeat their performance against Elizabethtown the following weekend in the first round of national play at Elizabethtown.

Like deja vu the contest was a duplicate of the conference championship game with Partilla scoring the game's only goal and Leonard registering a team record eleventh shutout. Lebanon Valley had proven, without a doubt, that the MAC Championship was well deserved and earned their spot in the regional finals.

The Valley women's season came to an end at the NCAA Division III regional championship against Bloomsburg University. The defending national champs defeated Lebanon Valley College, 2-0, and later went all the way to the NCAA Division III finals.

The team finished with a superb overall tally of 15 wins, 4 losses, and 2 ties and shattered many of the existing College records. Individually, the Lebanon Valley women finished equally as impressively: Vandergrift and Partilla were both selected for the Division III CFHCA Penn Monto National and Regional All-American teams while Leonard and Brandt were both named to the Regional Honorable Mention team. In addition, Aumiller, Partilla, and Vandergrift were all named to the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference (MASCAC) All-Star Team.

The 1988 field hockey team will undoubtedly go down in the record books as one of the best teams in the history of Lebanon Valley College athletics.

Alumni Weekend 1989

Plans have taken shape for Alumni Weekend 1989, June 2, 3, and 4. This year's theme will once again be the rose, with Steve Scanniello '78, rosarian for the Cranford Rose Garden at the Brooklyn Botanic Gardens, and the Harrisburg Rose Society providing rose care demonstrations and conducting tours of nearby private gardens.

As part of the rose programming, the Alumni Services Office has arranged with the Brooklyn Botanic Gardens to have Steve Scanniello's video "For the Love of Roses: A Year in the Life of a Rosarian" available for sale. Starring Steve, the camera follows him at work in each of the four seasons as he shows exactly how to plant, prune, cultivate, ward off insects and diseases, and make longlasting bouquets. For those unable to attend the weekend, the video (which retails for $19.95) can be ordered directly by calling (718) 622-4433, ext. 339, or by writing Videos, Brooklyn Botanic Garden, 1000 Washington Ave., Brooklyn, NY 11225.

Also being planned for the weekend are: a genuine "New England Clam Bake," an outdoor jazz concert with "Third Stream," the Alumni Awards Luncheon, and reunions for the classes of '24, '29, '34, '39, '44, '49, '54, and '59.

For more information about the scheduled events, look for the Alumni Weekend brochure in April or call (717) 867-6220.

Alumni Return for Homecoming 1988

Over 300 alumni returned to the Lebanon Valley College campus to join in the festivities during Homecoming 1988. The weekend's activities included a bonfire/pep rally and coffeehouse entertainment by Dave Wopat on Friday evening. On Saturday, students, alumni, and their families enjoyed the annual campus carnival, followed by the Homecoming parade, and the winning football game over long-time rival Albright College. The weekend concluded on Sunday with the Homecoming worship service. Special groups returning for reunions included alumnae athletes and the classes of '88, '78, '73, '68, and '63.

Homecoming Queen Bryna Vandergrift '89, Mt. Joy, PA, rides down Sheridan Avenue on her way to the football stadium.

Walmer Receives "Hot Dog" Frank Award

On Saturday, February 11, 1989, "Hot Dog" Frank Aftosmes presented the 1989 "Hot Dog" Frank Athletic Service Award to Dr. John D. Walmer '38 for his contributions to the College's athletic programs.

Named after Frank Aftosmes, past owner of Annville's famed "Hot Dog Frank's" restaurant, the award is given to an alumnus, parent, or friend of the College who exemplifies "Hot Dog's" enthusiastic support of the Lebanon Valley athletic programs.

Dr. Walmer, a long-time supporter of Lebanon Valley Athletics, served the College for a number of years as a volunteer physician for the athletic teams. When he returned to the area after working for a number of years in State College, PA, he volunteered his time to the Dean of Students Office as a consultant in mental health counseling and to the football team as an auxiliary physician for away games.

Today, Dr. Walmer can be seen at various athletic events escorting elderly, and often incapacitated, former Lebanon Valley athletes who otherwise would not be able to attend the games.

LVC Football History Being Researched

Glenn Hall '49 is researching Lebanon Valley's football history in preparation for the sport's 100th year at the College. Although he has uncovered some information in the College's archives, Glenn would like to add personal reminiscences to the basic story. He needs additional information on subjects like player recruitment, scholarships, practices, training tables, equipment, coach's personalities and styles, accounts of big games, locations of games, student and College support, cheers, and game programs.

If you have information you would like to contribute to Glenn's efforts, please send written accounts or audio tapes to: Glenn Hall, 670 Linton Hill Road, Newtown, PA 18940.

Lebanon Valley College Alumni: Whereabouts Unknown

Finding a former classmate can be just like looking for the proverbial "needle in a haystack." But not anymore. Soon an impressive directory of our great alumni will be available to help you locate your old friends.

The new Lebanon Valley College Alumni Directory, scheduled for release in March/April 1990, will be the most up-to-date and complete reference on over 8,500 Lebanon Valley College alumni ever compiled! This comprehensive volume will include current name, address and phone number, academic data, plus business information (if applicable), bound into a classic, library-quality edition.

The Alumni Services Office has contracted the prestigious Bernard C. Harris Publishing Company, Inc., to produce the directory. Harris will soon begin researching and compiling the information to be printed in the directory by mailing a questionnaire to each alumna/us. (If you prefer not to be listed in the directory, please contact the Alumni Services Office as soon as possible.)

The new Lebanon Valley College Alumni Directory will soon make finding a Lebanon Valley College alumna/us as easy as opening a book. Look for more details on the project in future issues of the Valley.

Alumni Travel to the Holy Land

On February 3, 1989, nine alumni and friends of Lebanon Valley College departed for a nine-day travel/study program in the Holy Land sponsored by the Alumni Services Office in cooperation with Educational Opportunities, Inc. Participants included: Florence Asbury, Newton and Priscilla Bair, Mary and Paul Gerhart '49, LaVerne Good, Anne Shemeta '51, Charles Wolfe '44, and Connie Trostle '60 who served as the group's leader.

Of the experience, Anne Shemeta wrote: "From the overwhelming sense of peace in the calm hills of Galilee to the energizing hustlebustle of Jerusalem, we shared a rich experience both re-tracing our Lord's footsteps and seeing Old Testament sites. It was an exciting journey!

"Led by caring, capable Connie, our compatible group enjoyed good flights, beautiful weather, excellent lectures, scrumptious food, splendid hotel accommodations, and our Palestinian tour guide, Theophilis, provided on-going enlightening facts and figures.

"From Masada to the Mt. of Beatitudes; from Megiddo to the Mt. of Olives; from the Garden of Gethsemane to the Garden Tomb, we were awed — moved — exultant! I shall never forget Charlie Wolfe's stirring prayer in the chapel at Mt. Nebo, where God showed Moses the Promised Land! Nor shall I ever share a Communion Service more meaningful than that at the Garden Tomb, in which Paul Gerhart participated!

"I am bursting with refreshment of spirit — a pilgrimage it was, and I 'shall never be the same,' just as they told me it would be!"

The Alumni Services Office, in cooperation with Educational Opportunities, Inc., will sponsor two travel/study programs in 1990: The Holy Land (departure on February 1, 1990) and The Alpine Odyssey/ Oberammeragau Passion Play (departure August 14, 1990). Although the Alumni Services Office will not be sponsoring participation in the Vienna, Budapest/"Music of the Heart and Soul" program this summer (departure each week from June 27 to August 8, 1989), interested alumni may contact Marty '51 and Connie Trostle, regional representatives for EOI, at (717) 766-5059 for more information.

Alumni Basketball

Former male and female basketball players returned to campus this winter to participate in alumni basketball games.

On January 28th, the women's White team decisively defeated the Blue team (47-25). Returning for the losing (but energetic!) Blue team were: Gloria Scarle '79, Judy Uhrich '78, Cindy Fabian '79, Elizabeth Smith '76, and Dixie Drybread '75. The White team included: Janice GaNun '73, Steph Smith '87, Laurie Kratzer '84, and Jen Deardorff '86.

On February 11th, the 23 men returned to play prior to the men's varsity game against Albright College. Included were: Marty Gluntz '53, Jay S. Stanton '66, Frank Kuhn Jr. '70, Chip Etter '72, Pete Harubin '72, Ed Iannarella '73, Lin Griffith '74, Frank Rutherford '74, Charles D. Brown '75, David W. Ruth Engle Bender '15

Ruth Engle Bender '15, professor emeritus of music, died at the age of 93 on Saturday, October 29, 1988 in Annville.

Mrs. Bender was a strong strand in the fabric of Lebanon Valley College. Before she was born, her father, Samuel F. Engle, became a member of the Board of Trustees and was president of that body at the time of his death in 1915. Her brother, J. Raymond Engle, assumed the board presidency upon the death of his father and served until his own death in 1942. Her uncle, Benjamin H. Engle, was also a trustee; it was he who made the gift of Engle Conservatory in 1897. And her husband, the late Dr. Andrew Bender '06, was professor of chemistry at the College for thirty years.

Mrs. Bender taught music for more than 50 years at Lebanon Valley College. For six years, she was director of the College's conservatory of music, and for 39 years she served as a full-time instructor. She retired in June 1960, and served for several years after that as a part-time instructor. In 1971, she received the Alumni Association's Distinguished Alumnus Award.

Perhaps nothing in Mrs. Bender's professional career gave her more satisfaction than the class piano instruction which she pioneered more than four decades ago. She introduced an average of thirty-five small children to the keyboard each year with what is called a "multiple key approach." The black keys held no terror for her young pupils. As soon as they could pick out "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star" in the key of C, they could do it also in C sharp major. Parents who remember their own laborious five-finger exercises were amazed at their offspring's casual talk of the tonic and dominant seventh as well as this facility in transposition.

There is little doubt that Ruth and her late husband were of the most beloved and respected of Lebanon Valley professors.

Surviving are William L. Bender '40 and Elizabeth Bender Ulrich '38.

Students took matters into their own hands when they realized they needed a place to store the material and memorabilia the Honors Class of 1990 collected from alumni while researching the history of the College (see "Honors Students Study Valley Tradition," page 7). St. Paul's Church, on Route 934 (owned by the College since 1970), was chosen as the perfect storage space for the project. Lance Dieter '92 (left), Steve Trapnell '90 (center), and Matt Guenther '90 arduously work to clean the building for the new materials.

College Meets 125th Anniversary Campaign Goal

"The Lebanon Valley College 125th Anniversary Campaign has exceeded its goal and is still going strong," it was announced by Mr. Charles W. Wolfe '44, National Chairperson. "The Campaign has gone over the top of its $6,500,000 goal, only 16 months from its October 1987 kickoff.

"Although the dollar goal has been surpassed, several objectives must yet be met," reminded Mr. Wolfe. "Principal among these is the Kline Challenge."

The Kline Challenge, a $1.2 million dollar program over the next five years, challenges Lebanon Valley to increase its current unrestricted giving from $537,000 in 1988 to $937,000 by 1992 (see "Lebanon Valley College Receives $400,000 Challenge Grant from Kline Foundation," page 10). Multi-year commitments will be sought to help meet this goal.

"We ask that as many donations as possible be designated as unrestricted," urged Mr. Wolfe, "one of our most pressing needs is to meet the Kline Challenge. Now is the time to enlist everyone's help."

Look for more details in the Spring 1989 issue of The Campaign Reporter.
